Los Angeles, 18 February 2016 - Philippine President Benigno S. Aquino III received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree from Loyola Marymount University (LMU) on 17 February 2016 in Los Angeles, California in recognition of his dedication to the country, integrity and embodiment of Jesuit values.

According to LMU President Timothy Law Snyder, Ph.D., “President Aquino represents precisely what we, as educators, mean about helping our students become women and men for and with others. His deep commitment to the Filipino people is a model from which each of us can learn.”

Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti and Congresswoman Maxine Waters were among the guests during the conferral ceremony that is co-sponsored by the LMU School of Education’s Teach for the Philippines Program.

LMU, founded in 1911, is the largest Catholic Jesuit University in Southwest California and ranked third in Best Regional Universities/West by the US News and World Report.
